++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mostly wet and windy, but bright spells tomorrow afternoon.

This Evening and Tonight:
Today's rain will persist into the evening, before clearing to the north by midnight. After briefly tuning dry, further heavy rain moves in from the west during the early hours. Staying cloudy throughout and very windy, with coastal gales. Minimum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Thursday:
A wet morning, with the band of heavy rain continuing to push eastwards across the region. Clearing by midday, leaving sunshine and blustery showers. Feeling mild. A few showers overnight. Maximum temperature 10 deg C (50 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Prolonged rain on Friday and Saturday, locally heavy, especially over the moors. Strong winds during this time too, with coastal gales. Drier and calmer on Sunday. A very mild weekend.
